FOR LEISENRING NO. 1 FETE

PERSONAL.

Dance at Stader Summer Home. The other day summer home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stader at McCovey Spring, was the scene of a delightful dance given last evening by Mrs. Stader and Miss J. D. Madigan in honor of the Misses Kathleen and Mary Elmer of Indianapolis, Ind., and Miss Virginia Vibick of East End, Pittsburgh. The affair was perfect in all its appointments. Over one hundred lanterns strung around the telephone pole and among the trees added charm to the beautiful surroundings. The dance was the most enjoyable social gathering given for some time for the summer social set. Over 20 couples were present and 100 indulged in dancing on the large porch. Excellent music was furnished by Kelle's orchestra. Bouquets of nasturtiums, asters and other flowers were lavishly used in decorating. Two large kerosene candles in the lighting of the grounds. A well arranged luncheon was served. The guests were convened and from that hour on the lawn was a pleasant scene. The menu of dinner guests were: Miss John Gleason and Mrs. John Gleason of Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. Frank of Pittsburgh, and Mr. G. Bond of California.

TUESDAY EVENING, AUG. 27, 1912.

A POLITICAL CONGRESS.
The Congress which finally advanced yesterday after a continuous session of almost unprecedented length devoted more of its time to partisan purposes than to the national welfare, and the country as well as many of its members breathed a sigh

of relief when it quit the job.

Composed of a Democratic House
and a Senate controlled by Democratic and Progressive votes its chief aim and purpose has been to manufacture campaign material for the coming Presidential election. To this end it has inaugurated and conducted a number of so-called "investigations" of large corporations with a view to proving the Trusts to be the foes of the people and hastening their downfall by the Republican party.

To this the Democrats have added
numerous attacks upon the Tariff bill passed by the last Republican Congress, despite the fact that they tacitly agreed with the Republicans at the time that subsequent revisions of the Tariff should be made only upon the recommendation of a non-partisan Tariff Board to be established with the consent and support of the Democrats.

The attempts at Tariff revision are consciously attempts to discredit the administration of President Taft and weaken his strength as a candidate for reelection. The bills reducing import duties were prepared without serious investigation of the subject. Upon
 the whole they were horizontal reductions,
 almost without rhyme or reason
 but in strict accordance with former Democratic revisions which proved so disastrous to the business and the people of the country.

The attempts at Tariff revision are

 the whole they were horizontal reductions,
 almost without rhyme or reason
 but in strict accordance with former

 people of the country.

The Democratic Tariff bills were enacted with the full knowledge that President Taft would veto them.
 Their authors timed not at public refusal from real or imaginary burdens
but at political advancement only;
 yet there is nothing in their Tariff modifications which indicates that the nation is in need of protection from its own Tariff.

The Bull Moose is a Boss Bluffer, but Senator Penrose has called his hand, and a Show Down is inevitable.

The H. & O. is reorganizing its system on the most system with the result that some Connellsville citizens are higher. Connellsville has a reputation for turning out good railroad men just as the Connellsville region
has the name of making model
mine and coke plant managers.

Urging the necessity for better methods of conserving the health of the 20,- 000,000 school children in the United States the Federal Bureau of Education calls attention, in a circular just issued, to the fact that 75 per cent
need attention today for physical deficiencies which are prejudicial to health and which are partially or completely remediable. Pointing out the ailments that the children suffer, the circular states that 100,000 have organic heart disease, 1,000,000 at least have now or had tubercular affection of the lungs,
another million have spinal curvature,
flat foot or some other deformity seriously enough to interfere with their health. A million have defective hearing, five millions have defective vision and an equal number are afflicted with some form of in-continence. Thirty per cent and over 4,000,000 have enlarged tonsils, 25 per cent or ten million have defective teeth which are interfering with health. Several millions of the children possess one or two or more of the foregoing kinds of defects. To become an effective instrument for the protection and promotion of child health the school should not only be a sanitary, healthful place for children, but that the various agencies in public education
should be so organized that each child may be given the best possible opportunity to escape weakness and disease.

Improper handling of eggs is responsible for annual loss of the huge sum of $1,000,000, according to Department of Agriculture experts who have been investigating the egg smashing business.
This enormous loss is due to small eggs, cracked and broken eggs, dirty, stale and rotten eggs. The improper handling is a loss to farmers, middlemen and consumers alike, say
the experts, and they urge everybody to get busy and institute reforms which will do away with it. Here are some of the plans suggested for betterment:
Encourage the production of large eggs. Take steps to insure proper disposition of inferior eggs. Dirty eggs will be reduced to a minimum if proper care of nests is taken. More than 10 per cent of eggs received in New York

MEADOW MILL PLANT TO REOPEN MONDAY; IDLE THREE MONTHS

Several Hundred to Resume
Work in American Sheet
& Tin Plate Works.

$15,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Funeral for Frederick Farley, Who Dropped Dead of Heart Disease, Scheduled for This Afternoon at 2 o'clock; Other Sentimental News.

Special to the Courier.
SCOTTSVILLE, Aug. 27.—Employees of the Meadow Mill plant of the American Sheet & Tin Plate Company
were notified yesterday that operations at the plant probably will be resumed Monday, September 1. Several hundred men will be affected. The Meadow Mill plant was closed down the first of June for repairs.
A new engine has been installed and the entire interior of the mill improved. It is said the cost of improvements and work of repairing cost over $15,000. The four mills of plant No. 1 are closed because of the breaking of the cranks of "Old Nancy," the huge engine.

TOURING MAINE.
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webster and family of Pittsburgh, who are touring Maine and the northeastern part of the country in their automobile,
Charles Carroll, of the Central garage, is the chauffeur.

FUNERAL TODAY.

The body of the late Frederick Farley, who dropped dead on a street in Pittsburg, Friday evening, was brought to the home of John Mullen yesterday afternoon. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in the South-dale cemetery. Farley was a former resident of Scottdale, being employed as sheepherd at the Meadow Mills and went to housekeeping at 139 Arch street, North Side. He was born in England and came to Scottdale where a young man. He began work in the mills at which he worked until his death. He was a member of the M.H. Men's Benevolent and formerly of the members of the Volunteer Fire Department of this city. The department will attend to a body.

RUTH KELLY.

Ruth Kelly, the one-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kelly, of Monaca, died Saturday and the body was brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donley, of South Monaca, where this morning, when funeral services were held, interment in the St. John's

Cemetery.

Thomas Kelly, of Monaca, died
yesterday at Greensburg Monday.
Mrs. Mary McEntire, of Monaca, will play the piano at the ob-ituation No. 1, at 2 o'clock, tomorrow Friday. The number of the piano will also be the number of a new piano
which will present a strong team.

HELEN ELIZABETH RANSAS.

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Ransas, of Monaca, Kansas, are spending from Monday until Friday, after a two weeks' stay with the former's brother, J. Harvey Ransas and other relatives. They will stop at Bath, Ohio, for a visit and then return to their home in Monaca, where she will present a great change weight during her absence
of almost 25 years.

SPONSOR TO SPEAKER.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Zimmerman and Miss Edna Miller, sister of the former, left on Saturday for姊妹 J. Harvey Ransas, brother of the former, and his wife, Mrs. Zimmerman, former resident of the Monaca valley and she was surprised at the great changes wrought during her absence
of almost 25 years.

REUNIONED FRIENDS.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Loker left yesterday after a two weeks' stay
with the former's brother, J. Harvey Ransas and other relatives. They will
stop at Bath, Ohio, for a visit and then
from there return to Dayton. Mr.
Loker is a member of the old Loker family and his absence from it is greatly regretted.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot cure the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one remedy for the deafness that is by constitutional remediation.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the membranes of the ear. When this is inflamed
you have a rumbling sound of imperfect
hearing, and when it is entirely closed, you have no hearing, and unless the inflammation can be removed and the ear restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; also the result of too much use of the ear, which is nothing but an inflamed condition
of the mucous surfaces.

Miss Ruth Taylor of the New York Institute of Musical Art, who will teach the violin department at the Mt.
Pleasant Scientific and Classical Institute, has come here from her home
at Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Phoebe and Robert Cummins
have arrived at Connellsville
for a few days.

John Powers and son, Joseph,
of Pittsburgh, were calling on friends here
yesterday.

Mrs. Anna P. Powers and daughter, Beulah, of McKeesport, have arrived with her mother, Mrs.
Cummins.

Mrs. J. J. Hirschman and Miss Mary
Stephens were shopping in Pittsburgh
yesterday.

Miss Ethel Garber has returned home from a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Henderson and family have returned from a trip to friends at McKeesport.

Misses Clara Shreve and Mabel
Marsh were callers in Greensburg yesterday.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

No American teacher or adult student need go without higher training no matter how deficient his early education may have been. The summer school has solved the problem. In many ways the growth of the summer school movement is one of the most interesting aspects of education in the United States. About one-third of the colleges and universities hold summer sessions, and many of the normal schools have taken up the idea. Dr.
Franklin P. Clark, of the United States Commissioner of Education, has just returned from a visit to a number of the schools in the South and Middle West,
and reported a remarkable increase in attendance and interest. At the Summer School of the South, in Knoxville, Tennessee, there were 2,400
students this year, representing 36
States and three foreign countries; 100 courses were given. At Wooster, Ohio, which began a few years ago with 49
students, there were about 1,100 in the session just closed. The State of Ohio now has four or five thousand teachers attending summer school every year.

Particularly significant is the growth
of summer schools in the Carolinas,
where the movement started comparatively late. At the University of North Carolina there was an attendance of 450
this year, just double last year's enrollment.
At the normal school at Greensboro, North Carolina, a session of eight weeks was held, the first in the history of the institution, and 200
enthusiastic teachers were in attendance.
At the summer session of the Wilmington Normal College, Rock Hill,
South Carolina, particular attention was paid to problems of industrial education and rural training. In addition, 1,000 participated in the course. There are but a few of many indications of the marvelous spread of the summer school idea all over the country.

The sand bin, the slide, the plant
table, the horizontal board, Indian baskets, the hobby horse and girls,
arts for valve hall and letter bath, running track and jumping pit, and
a skating rink where the climate permits, these are some of the distinctive features of an up-to-date playground,
as planned by Henry G.
Curtis in a bulletin just issued by the United States Bureau of Education.
Mr. Curtis shows how the attitude of the public has changed in the last 10 years, since the first great playground movement was started. The typical school playground used to be as bare and forbidding as a prison; the modern spirit requires that it shall be roomy, inviting, well cared for open at all times to the children, and equipped with every safe means for enjoyable, profitable play.

George Peabody College, for the Training of Teachers, at Nashville, Tennessee, is attracting wide attention
in its effort to raise a million dollars for its endowment fund. The college is conspicuous for its high aim,
believing that "the most urgent educational need of the South is trained leadership." It seeks to furnish men that will teach in the South "what they learned and John Hopkins have done for medicine, and what Teachers College of New York has done for teaching."
The amount needed for this new undertaking is $1,500,000, and the trustees of the Peabody fund have offered $500,000, provided the college will raise the million.

Twenty-one German universities had 55,015 students in the winter semester 1911-12, as compared with 54,822 in the preceding semester.

Nearly 5,000 students from foreign countries studied at American institutions of higher learning in 1911.

A striking instance of the prevailing cosmopolitanism of American life is afforded by the German School of the Northwest, where a great number of students from the following foreign countries are studying: Japanese, German, French, Spanish, Mexican, German, Spanish, French, Japanese. The basis of the work of the school is German; a thoroughly equipped Bohemian course parallels the German course; and the sciences and mathematics are taught in English; while other languages are taught as required.

In Rome, in the time of the Republic, 60 days in every year were devoted to public festivals recognized by law.
The American Republic has not reached such a number of holidays,
but its schools surpassed it long ago,"
says the current report of the United States Bureau of Education.
The document points out, however,
that there is now a wholesome trend away from the custom of granting an overabundance of school holidays.

"We find widespread within the college, as in the community, the desire of intellectual socialism—a desire to teach only those things by which one can minister immediately to the needs of the many," declares John L. Smith, of the University of North Carolina, in his report to the United States Bureau of Education.

SIMPLE HOUSE GOWN.
An Odd Whimsy
In-Button Trimming.

IN WHITE COTTON SATIN.

This simple house gown was designed for a young English actress. The material is white cotton, and the plaited down the front give height and dignity. The arrangement of the buttons, half under the buttonhole, is an odd whimsy.

DRESSMAKING BIDS.

Contracts For Sewing Awarded In Businesslike Fashion.

Letting out the making of a summer wardrobe to the lowest bidder is a new wrinkle to our dressmaker who was recently invited to participate in such a contest.

"I have a number of novas, separate blouses and shirt waists, which I will make up by June 1," wrote the woman who had the contract to let. "Will you kindly call at my house for particulars and make an estimate of charges?"

The dressmaker went and named a figure. When she came back she said she never felt so important in her life.

"It was like bidding for a government job," she said, "and when I agreed to make up so many yards of taffeta, silk and linen for a certain sum, I felt as if I were signing a contract to drap the columns of the library or postoffice or some other public building. That illusion was heightened by the size of the customer, who is stately enough for statuary, and solid enough for memory. There is only a small chance of my getting the work, for she invited scores of other dressmakers to compete, some of whom are likely to outbid me, but if I do get it I will be the first to ever obtained on those businesslike terms."

The New Hat Tilt.
If you wish to be fashionable wear your hat on a gentle slope just touching the right eyebrow and continue if you can not to look rakish, but quite seriously come off it. If you like and if the gods or your hairdresser has seen fit to provide you with hair in twists and coils at the back you may reveal the fact. You may even have puffs at the side and take the public into your confidence about it.

But out of doors you must conceal the fact that there is any hair on top or wandering in waves or like coils over your forehead. Not a strand of hair should show in front, which is all very well so long as the hat is on, but if we follow the fashion pretty tightly we shall all look as soon as our hats are removed. One can foresee a revival of the great theater hat difficulty.

THE CLOCK OF DEATH.

It was the first astronomical timepiece made in England. The clock at Hampton court palace derived its unpleasant title by reason of a superstition that whenever any one long resident in the palace dies the clock immediately stops. It is on record that when Anne of Denmark, the queen of James I, died the old timepiece was striking four and that it stopped almost before the last stroke sounded. Since that time it is said to have repeated this grisly proceeding each time a royal personage within its jurisdiction died.

At any rate, the clock has an interesting history quite aside from this. It was the first astronomical timepiece made in England, being constructed in 1540 for Henry VIII. Thirty-two years ago it was brought out of a shed where it had lain neglected for nearly half a century, and by order of the then secretary of the office of works it was re-erected in the courtyard opposite the entrance to the state apartments. There is historical evidence to the effect that it was built by one Nicholas Cratzer, a German astronomer who came to England at the invitation of Cardinal Wolsey.

This old timepiece tells the hour, the month, the day of the month, the position of the sun and the number of days since the beginning of the year, the phases of the moon and its age, the hour at which it crosses the meridian and the time of high water at London bridge. The time required to wind it is half an hour every week. The weights have a descent of over sixty feet.—Harper's.

THE VANISHING SEA COW.

A Marine Curiosity That Is Rapidly Nearing Extinction.

One of the largest fish that has inhabited the waters of the gulf of Mexico and the south Atlantic coast of this country and which is almost extinct is known as the manatee. It was found in great numbers a century ago, and even a few years back this creature was quite plentiful in certain localities.

It is very gentle for a large fish and easily captured in heavy nets, which are usually stretched across the mouths of rivers emptying into the south Atlantic or the gulf of Mexico. The flesh is very delicious and brings a high price, having a strong resemblance to the very finest veal. The skeleton is valued at $100, and the skin if removed properly and cured by those who understand its properties will bring a like amount.

This fish is often ten to twelve feet in length and weighs about 2,000 pounds. It is no gentle fish, it will not strike the light craft that happens to be near it, and when captured it shows no resistance whatever.

It is safe to say that in the next quarter of a century this creature will become extinct unless specimens are preserved simply to prevent the complete loss of one of our most wonderful sea creatures.

It lives wholly on salt water vegetation and growths found in the mouths of the rivers emptying into the sea—New York World.

The Spell of London.

The greatest of modern French poets, Paul Verlaine, fell instantly under the spell of London, even though he came to it as an exile to earn a wretched living as a teacher of French. "As a whole," he wrote, "it is very unexpected and a hundred times more amusing than Italy or Paris or the banks of the Rhine." And again: "The Cock are wonderful—Carthago, Tyre, all called into one." He deplored the lack of clean cafes, but nevertheless, "No matter, this incredible town is very well, black as a crow and noisy as a duck." In Verlaine's view London had no monuments except the docks. He ignored Westminster, the Tower and all the sights. For him they do not seem to have existed.—London Chronicle.

WASHINGTON AS A JUMPER.

The Father of His Country Was a Champion In His Day.

There is an athletic record of which every American ought to be proud, although it is not found in any sporting chronicle. It was made by George Washington of Virginia and was a running broad jump of twenty-two feet three inches.

Exactly when and where Washington made this jump is not known, but it is to be historical.

Thackeray refers to it in "The Virginians," where he tells of the jumping match between Harry Warrington and Lord March and Rugien. Harry wins with a jump of twenty-one feet three inches against his lordship's eighteen feet six inches. In his letter to Virginian, Harry says he knows there was another in Virginia, Colonel G. Washington, who could clear a foot more.

If the story is correct Washington must have been a wonderful athlete. He could easily have won any intercollegiate championship competition up to 1880 and most of the national championships. Then, too, it must be remembered that the future Father of His Country did not wear spats like the athletes of today, nor did he have a cinder path for his "take-off," these improvements not having come into general use as early as the middle of the eighteenth century. Washington today would be a fast breaker.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat

Chard.

Chard is the blanched leaves, leaf stalks or midrib of certain plants, as of the globe artichoke and white beet, also a variety of white beet; Swiss chard beet, leaf beet. In cooking Swiss chard for greens the wide white midribs are cut out and the green leaves are cut alone, the ribs being cooked separately and served like asparagus, for which they are an appetizing substitute.

Then, for a change, a dish of leaves and ribs together is served as greens, but this always seems a waste of good material when either is better alone. The beans greedily eat any that may be left when the table is cleared, or the cows and pigs will dispose of it, so that not a leaf need be wasted.

All things considered, Swiss chard is one of the most satisfactory greens a gardener can raise.—Exchange.

"Tire. No one wants to steal them. No one has an opportunity. I'd like to see a thief get away with that big fellow. Jenkins sits on the steps all winter with a gun."

"Are they protected now?"

"Well, not with a gun. There's no need when we are here."

Hip tried the card room door as we descended; it gave to his touch and swung open. He switched on the lights and looked about. The room was quite in order. I couldn't see any cause for the pucker between his eyes. He lighted a cigarette and smoked it thoughtfully as we descended the stairs. He smoked where he pleased; he had learned to put the ashes in his pocket. Occasionally he would remove his cigarette from his lips, regard the lighter and intently, then smile or frown, and smoke again. I watched the performance, highly amused.

"A clue, Monsieur Lecoq?" I whistled.

"Tire. I'm a fool," he replied. "I'm letting my imagination run away with me."

"I can prove an alibi this time," I pursued slyly. "I haven't been in the card room for a month."

"Please don't, dear," he said quickly.

"But you must tell it," I urged when I had sufficiently recovered from the shock of it. "It's too important not to. Everybody here is in danger unless— I did not go on, but involuntarily I glanced at the door where Minette had gone out.

"I will not suspect Minette," she said firmly, noticing the action. "She was with my mother when I was born, and she doesn't steal. There are a thousand ways to prove her innocence."

I knew that in the same thought I suspected her, and I remembered Louise's argument that Minette was not at the reception in town, or the Abercrombies'. Also that at the very minute the ruby was stolen Minette was giving Natalie a message. Minette distinctly was innocent.

"No, I shall not tell it," Minette pursued, "not yet, anyhow. It's too absurd. And I shall rely upon your discretion, my dear. When we see what happens to Mr. Abbott, then—"

I came to my feet with an exclamation.

"You believe Mr. Abbott guilty?" I asked.

"I refuse to believe anything," she replied coolly.

"I beg your pardon," I said, "but I thought you once told me you were sure Mr. Abbott was not a thief."

"That was before I knew about the emerald bracelet. My dear, I can't reasonably believe he's innocent now. There isn't another emerald bracelet like that in the world. Detective found it in Mr. Abbott's possession; he doesn't deny it; he can't."

"But they didn't find the ruby, and whatever it was you lost at the Abercrombies'" I protested.

"A sapphire and a diamond bracelet," she sighed.

"And before that? His shielding someone," I burst out. "I know it; I feel it's of it."

"Who?"

I shook my head. Every time I tried to conjecture I brought up against a blank wall.

I stared at her, startled.

"Then you think—?"

"I think if she did the thief is a woman, as Mr. Hazard thinks." Jo replied calmly. "The men got out when I started to undress her."

"It almost looked as if you did it purposely."

"I did. When I saw her fall I thought of what you told me of her fainting at the reception in town. I acted more quickly than I thought. I tried to remember who was near her—"

"Well," I demanded excitedly, when she didn't go on.

"Some one in dark blue."

"Mrs. Sergeant," I said.

"And the very fat one?"

"Mrs. Higginson."

"And—really I don't remember. She was standing near a window, I think—"

"Jo, where was the duke?"

"At the piano, all the way across the room." She regarded me quizzically. "Til really like to know if she—she lost anything."

"I know a way to find out," I said.

"Ask her."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Midnight Watch.

I knocked upon Natalie's door; Minette opened it. Instead of finding Natalie in bed, as I expected, she was sitting near an open window, surprisedly rosy.

"Can I do anything for you?" I inquired.

"Nothing, thanks, unless you'll stay and talk to me," she replied, rather cordially. "I feel quite well and cheerful and I can't account for faint for. Won't you sit down? It's sweet of you to come, dear."

I looked after Minette's retreating figure.

"I came to ask you a question—an impudent question," I said frankly. "It was that, and I hated to be hypocritical about it. But I'd like to stay with you if you really care to have me. I hope you'll think I'm tactless and not curious. Did you take any of your jewels when—when you faint?"

"No."

"I can't say that I was surprised; I know I feel absurdly relieved."

"I'm awfully glad. It looks so very

I yawned good night and went. I think I was asleep before I touched the bed. I dreamed, and the dreams were not pleasant. I saw Winthrop, his arms covered with emerald bracelets; he plucked at them and they became little green snakes. Looking on, smiling, was His Grace, but instead of being small and dark he was tall and fair, with a scarlet across his cheek. Then the emerald bracelets were chains, and I was pushing frantically against the card-room door when it gave, and I was in a cell where Winthrop was walking up and down, up and down, dragging his chunking chains.

I awoke. Everything was quite still. I listened; I heard nothing. After deciding I wouldn't get up, I did. The doors were securely locked, I knew, but I tried them each in turn. Jo was sleeping soundly. I went into the sitting-room and looked out. There was the faint light of early dawn, just enough to distinguish the dim outline of trees. After a while I became conscious of the fact that some one was windily in the direction, as I thought, of the wing. My feet touched—space!

I plunged forward headlong and went down, down, down into darkness.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Bag of Loot.

When I regained consciousness, John was putting me on the couch in my sitting-room, and there was a jumble of faces before me—Jo, and Laura, and Mrs. Hazard, all badly frightened, clutching at unfastened dressing-gowns. Natalie was there, too, but I did not see her at first.

"I'm afraid she's badly hurt," John was saying. "Dr. Doctor Graham and over, Hap?"

Hip was crushing my hand within both of his, hurting me, but I didn't want to say so. Everything was terribly confusing. My right shoulder was hurt; the doctor said afterward I must have struck the wall so I plunged down the steps into the wing, and that saved me, perhaps, from breaking my neck. It was later I discovered that my right arm was broken, when I remembered the bag I had picked up and couldn't feel it.

"The jewels!" I cried.

"Jewels!" everybody repeated in one tone—a tone of surprise.

"I had them when I fell," I said. "A bag of jewels."

Hip groaned. I'm sure he thought I was up shivering before, but I was out of my head, and after a great deal of fuss he managed to get a drink of brandy down my throat—what he didn't spill down my neck. But John went out and came back presently with the bag. It was a dark green cloth bag like lawyers carry them—whatever they do carry in them. And thrown into it, like so many potatoes, was about the most beautiful collection of jewels I have ever seen. There was a silk stocking—Lydia containing more jewels; and Mrs. Higginson's hot-water bottle.

A thief would never look for jewels in a hot-water bottle," I quoted hy- pertically.

When I remembered again, John was sitting at my desk with the glistening mass spread out before him. Every one had crowded around him except Hip, who was kneeling beside the couch, holding my hand desperately and listening for the sound of the doctor's car. I remember that it hardly occurred to me how beautifully the lavender brocade dressing gown John wore and the soft pink of Jo's kimono harmonized—and lavender usually don't

"Did any one else hear the racket we made last night?"

"No," she replied. "No wonder they were robbed. Mrs. Cutler thinks there must have been an attempt to chloroform her. There was no cloth or anything that has been saturated, but the odor of chloroform was in her room. Thank Heaven, there's no way to imitate Winthrop in this."

Winthrop! I closed my lips tightly again. No one but I knew he had been there on the lawn; no one but myself was going to know it. But Thomas! The thought startled me. He knew it! But—

Louise finally broke the silence with one of her startling questions:

"Louise, are you going to marry Hap?"

I shook my head decidedly.

"Why not? Won't you tell me?"

"I have a reason, dear."

"Yes."

She paled a little, I didn't know why at the time.

"You won't confide in me?" she pleaded. "And let me help you? I can help you, no matter how difficult it is."

"Why, of course, I must tell you?"

I tried to think clearly. "I—I found them—found them in the card-room."

"Yes, dear," Jo soothed. "What were you doing in the card-room?"

"I heard a noise in the gallery and wanted to see—see—I found them—found them in the card room."

Everybody looked so queer! Natalie glanced quickly at Mrs. Hazard; a glance Laura intercepted. I sat up suddenly.

"Gurly, you don't think I took them!" I fell back against the pillows again with a groan, but it was merely little unseen devils tortured me when I moved.

"She must not talk," Laura explained. "Don't question her. It isn't fair. She doesn't know what she is saying. For Heaven's sake, why doesn't the doctor come?"

"She must not talk," Laura explained. "We'll let him spell his life with me," was what I said after all. "I couldn't spoil your chances with His Grace if you decide to want him."

Jo sat down beside me helplessly.

There was nothing anybody could do until the doctor did come.

"I think there's hope here from everybody," John remarked. "It's a jolly mess."

From the mess he separated Dorothy's kimono and Natalie's green lizard with the ruby eyes. Mrs. Abercrombie's moonstone set with sixteen large diamonds, and that crazy bow-knot collar of Mrs. Sergeant's. Then Natalie pointed out other things she recognized. But there was left a jumble of solitaires, handwoven but nondescript; rings and pendants, bracelets and brooches that only their owners could identify.

"Everybody but myself," Natalie said finally. "There's not a single thing there of mine."

Somewhat it seemed to me there ought to have been in the bag things she lost earlier.

"You had a pistol," I said weakly, thinking of it.

"Yes, but no one knew it but you,"

I said. And if a good, old thought had come to me out of my throbbing head I would have seen what everybody said later.

"The thieves were in the gallery," I tried to tell them. "I heard—I heard a hammer fall. I went to see—see—and I thought of Winthrop, and I closed my lips tightly for fear I would say I had seen him there on the lawn.

"Surely," Laura soothed. "We'll look. The thieves are gone now, but we have the jewels, so it's all right. No harm done. John will hold a levee after luncheon and return them."

I suppose it occurred to John what a job that was going to be, especially as he was apt to have a crowd of hysterical women on his hands any minute.

He tumbled the jewels back into the bag as Doctor Graham's horn rang.

"Dear, if you had told me something else, some awful thing that was keeping you from saying 'to Hap,' I would have loved you just the same. Remember that?"

It was a shameless statement. I wonder I did not see its significance at the time, but I only realized that her affection was one of the most wonderful things that had ever happened to me.

"Well, I'll be damned!" he exclaimed.

"This is my bag!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Disappearance.

Dawn found me lying on the couch in my sitting-room, pale and a little sick from the ether, with my right arm nicely bandaged up and a bruise on my shoulder about as big as a turkey platter. Doctor Graham, after mixing me some vile stuff—doctors are brutes about medicine—cheerfully turned to discuss art with Jo, apropos of the search of the gallery for any signs of disturbance. Nothing unusual was found anywhere, except the door at the bottom of the steps leading to the tennis courts was open, and a hammer that was proved did not belong to any one connected with Lone Oak was lying on one of the courts. The thieves had made good their escape during the commotion that followed my plunge down the steps into the wing.

When I awoke from the sleep the doctor prescribed it was noon. The room was fragrant with flowers and there was a huge bunch of pink roses that I knew had not been cut at Lone Oak. Laura was with me, and Cello tearfully hovered in the background. Cello brought my breakfast and Laura reluctantly told Jo he had gone, reluctantly.

"There's a nurse coming," she concluded.

"Nurse!" I exclaimed. "What do I want with a nurse? I'm going downstairs tonight if I can get a sieve over this arm."

"To prove I could get up, I did, but I was rather trembly."

"Louise, it was too funny about that silk stocking and the hot-water bottle," Laura laughed gleefully.

"Has everybody discovered the robbery?" I asked.

"Hap groaned. I'm sure he thought I was up shivering before, but I was out of my head, and after a great deal of fuss he managed to get a drink of brandy down my throat—what he didn't spill down my neck. It was later I discovered that my right arm was broken, when I remembered the bag I had picked up and couldn't feel it."

"No," she replied. "No wonder they were robbed. Mrs. Cutler thinks there must have been an attempt to chloroform her. There was no cloth or anything that has been saturated, but the odor of chloroform was in her room.

"Thank Heaven, there's no way to imitate Winthrop in this."

Winthrop! I closed my lips tightly again. No one but I knew he had been there on the lawn; no one but myself was going to know it. But Thomas! The thought startled me. He knew it! But—

SOLD CHEAP MILK IN "HORLICK MILK" JAR

W. W. Pierce, manager at Park and Washington, pleaded guilty before Justice of the Peace Bell to selling a class of malted milk from which "Horlick's Malted Milk" had been blown and when Horlick's Malted Milk was called for. He was fined $25 and costs. The complaint was signed by Health Commissioner Taylor, who is determined to stop the practice of substituting one brand of goods for another without notification of the substitution being made.—Oregon Sunday Journal, Portland, Oregon.

STEEL BUYING BY ANALYSIS URGED BY FEDERAL EXPERTS

United States Geological Survey Shows
Best Methods of Public Purchase.

Manufacturers and others who use coal in considerable quantity will be interested in Bulletin 41, of the United States Bureau of Mines, on the subject "Government Coal Purchases Under Specification." This bulletin, which has just come from the Public Printer, was prepared by George S. Ponn, engineer in charge of fuel inspection for the government, and contains a chapter on the fuel inspection laboratory of the bureau by Joseph D. Davis, chemist in charge. The bulletin is the fourth of a series showing the results of the purchase of coal by the government.

Mr. Ponn, in his introduction, says:

"The purchase of coal on the dealer's statement as to the quality or on the reputation of the mine or district producing the coal is gradually being discontinued. At present, most coal-purchasing contracts make definite provisions regarding the desired heating value of a coal and the composition as shown by analysis. The heating value is usually expressed in British thermal units and the composition specified is that shown by proximate analysis. The price to be paid for delivered coal is made to depend on whether the analysis and heating value of samples representing the delivery shows the quality to be above or below the quality set forth in the contract.

"Large coal consumers are beginning to appreciate more and more the importance of the cost of power as a factor in the cost of producing a finished article. The endeavor to increase the efficiency and the economical operation of a power plant calls for an intimate knowledge of the quality of the coal being used. The purchase of coal under specifications insures the purchaser getting what he pays for and the coal being of the quality guaranteed. In addition, the analysis and tests of the delivered coal furnish data whereby the power plant results can be comparatively studied and a continuous check maintained on the conditions of operation.

"The reply to a circular letter sent to the mayor of every city of over 100,000 population in the United States brought out the fact that about 35 per cent of the cities requiring purchase under specifications, many of which are similar to those used by the government. A great many industrial concerns are likewise purchasing coal under specifications. The numerous requests received by the Bureau of Mines for authentic information concerning purchases of coal under specifications or according to their heating value, attest the growing interest in this subject.

"The purchase of coal on a specification basis is an important step toward the conservation of the mine and resources of the nation, for it results in the increased use of the lower grades of coal. The poorer grades find a market by competing with the better grades, not as to the price per ton, but as to the cost of an equal number of heat units.

"The purpose of this paper is to explain in general terms the methods that the government has found most satisfactory for the purchase of a large part of its coal supply, including the consideration of bids, the awarding of contracts, and the analysis of samples on which the price corrections are based.

"In this report, for the information of prospective bidders on government contracts, a list of the coal contracts in force during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, is furnished. General averages of the analyses during the fiscal year 1905 to 1910, inclusive, are tabulated for the various sizes of anthracite and also for the several kinds of bituminous coal purchased for government use, and the results for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1910, are shown in detail by months.

It is hoped that this information will be of value to both coal dealers and consumers."

IF HAIR'S YOUR PRIDE USE HERPICIDE

A feeling of uncertainty, a dread of possible disappointment, always goes with the "hair-removal" article of commerce. That is part of the purchase, just as much so as the label on the bottle.

You don't get this with a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide. It is not an experiment. You number among your acquaintances and friends hundreds who have used Herpicide with satisfaction, and you know that you can do the same. The results are always positive, always right.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and stops falling hair. Send 10c in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.
